MOOD:  mischievous
MUSIC: Blur - Out Of Time

It is, indeed, possible that tidying up everyone's desks before they came in and then doing nothing at all tricky to anyone all day was our best April Fools prank yet.

Pity we have to come up with an actual something for next year. Nothing on Earth will beat the spectacle of Wonder Woman probing her top drawer with a chopstick before putting her hand in to pull out her stapler.

Three things!

1) Okay, O., She Wants Revenge = yes. It's like the Eighties rose up from the grave and came looking

Experimental Whole Wheat Green Chile Robot Bread #1

Yes, baking with your hands is more fun. And the results have a better texture, and taste better.

Oh, that's beautiful. You made them do it to themselves.

It was a thing of beauty.

By the end of the day even Dad had the jitters.

Which made me feel better, let me tell you.

Mom, though. I don't know how she does it.

I never even saw her break a sweat.

I'll get her someday.

Now that I'm not tiptoeing (!) I wish I had video of the Cowboy standing glaring over the Platypus at 3:47 p.m. With the Platypus slouched in his chair and his feet up on his desk, looking wounded and saying, "What?"

Okay, not that wounded. Because then he snickered.

It was just a little before that that Wonder Woman cornered me in the kitchenette and begged me to have mercy.

She's still tougher than I am. I begged before lunch.

We may have become notorious.

I needed all my concentration to watch for booby traps in the supply cabinet.

Oh, that's just /cruel/.

I like it.

It's like serial killers and terrorists--fame will only encourage them.

Off-topic: I put up a recipe or two you might like. I've been meaning to give you that pork recipe for a while now. Shoulder's a nice lean cut, usually, and a braise like this keeps well, so I thought it might be well-suited to you.
